What is YouthBank?

YouthBank is a unique way of involving young people in community activity. It does this through grant-making committees run by young people. The funding distributed by these decision-making committees supports projects designed and run by young people, which address issues and concerns of direct importance to them.

YouthBank starts from the premise that involving young people in projects that they design and run for themselves is the most potent way of engaging young people in their community. A local YouthBank offers small groups of young people modest funding to support their ideas for action and change.

The young people, aged between 16 and 29, form themselves into local grant-making committees, which are supported by a host organisation committed to working participatively with them. Involving young people in grant making makes them more aware of the needs and aspirations of their local community and the ways in which they can make a difference.

Members of a local YouthBank work as a team taking all the relevant decisions for themselves. It is they who set the themes, create application procedures and criteria, undertake publicity work, interview young people, write reports to assist decision-making and undertake follow up work to learn from what has and has not worked. Their actions help create a climate that draws in other young people and challenges adults' perceptions of young people's capabilities and behaviour. The purpose of the YouthBank is to develop leadership opportunities; build capacity among the young grant-aided youth-led groups to engage in self-help and community action.
